For the purpose of the efficient teaching and in order to meet the set course goals and students' competencies the following methods will be used in the course: lecturing, analysis, interpretation, the use of computer, LCD projector etc.
The content of the lectures and practice classes are presented through an interactive approach which implies that students can discuss, exchange ideas between each other, learn from each other.
During lectures and practice classes or after them, the lecturer and the assistant are to be available to students through consultations, contacts and support for any indistinctnesses and explanations.

19. Assessment methods:

In order to check the acquired knowledge the following will be used:
- written method
- oral method

Written method includes the written assessment. The assessment will be realized through questions and answers from the course curriculum. The questions will be announced after the realization of the lectures.
The oral part of the exam will be performed on the basis of several questions from the curriculum and students' answers within the 10-15 minutes time frame.
Within their pre-exam duties, students will, during the semester, take two (2) preliminary exams that will include specific topics from the course curriculum, and they can earn 0-10 points. Next, for their presence at lectures and practice classes, and continuous active participation at lectures and practice classes during the whole semester a student can earn 0-15 points.
The final exam is written and includes the topics covered at lectures and practice classes in the whole semester. A student can earn 0-25 points at final written exam. A student can earn 0-25 points at final oral exam. After meeting the pre-exam duties, written and oral part of the exam, the competent lecturer will create a single complete grade together with the student.

20. Assessment components:

The final grade is based on the maximum number of points a student earned by meeting pre-exam duties and by passing the exam, and according to the quality of acquired knowledge and skills, and amounts to total of 100 points. The final grade is established according to the following scale:

Student's duties	Points
