

European Quality Assurance Forum (EQAF)

Dear colleague

There is still time for universities to apply to host the European Quality Assurance Forum (EQAF) in November 2019 and 2020.

EQAF has been organised annually since 2006 by EUA, ENQA, EURASHE and ESU, and has become the premier event for quality assurance (QA) in Europe, attracting over 400 participants from the main stakeholders in this field, including representatives from higher education institutions and QA agencies, students, researchers and policy makers.

By hosting EQAF in 2019 or 2020, universities have the opportunity to contribute to the continued success of the Forum, by making it a memorable event for European higher education stakeholders, while also gaining visibility for the institution. The call is open to EUA member universities, and joint bids between universities and members of the other organising associations (quality assurance agencies, student unions and professional higher education institutions) are also welcome. The organisers will give preference to applications from universities in countries where EQAF has not recently been held.

Details regarding the requirements for hosting the Forum can be found here. To find out more about how to apply, please contact QAForum@eua.eu. The deadline for submitting full bids is 30 April 2018.

We look forward to hearing from you.
